

SINS POINTED OUT BY CHRIST VERY NUMEROUS TODAY

People Still Search Scriptures But Do Not Follow Master

BASIS FOR HIS SERMON

Delivered by The Rev. H. L. Zepp at Union Service Last Evening

"Following Christ" is the subject of the sermon delivered by the Rev. Howard L. Zepp, pastor of First Baptist Church, at the union service in Bristol Presbyterian Church, last evening. The sermon was based on the 19th verse of the eighth chapter of Matthew. The sermon follows:

"Master, I will follow Thee whithersoever Thou goest."—Matt. 8:19.

This case of the Scribe who approached the great Teacher and declared his willingness to follow Him wherever He might lead, must have been a common occurrence. In all probability there were many in Christ's time who would have been willing to follow Him from place to place and enjoy the hospitality of the communities visited. On another occasion Jesus said: "Ye search the Scriptures, and ye will not come to Me." If you could have seen these people at work on the sacred Script you would have thought them very enthusiastic students. They read the Word; they reread it; they memorized it. They wrote it upon the doorposts of their houses. They bound it as frontlets between their eyes. They pored over it night and day. Not a jot was disregarded, not a tittle was overlooked. They were great in the Scriptures; they traced their path down the highroad of revelation. "Ye search the Scriptures, and ye will not come to Me."

Have we anything like that today? Are there people who, in our own time, are doing the very thing which was charged against the people of old? It sounds incredible that one can be a Bible student and yet not be a saint; that one can have a passion for the Word and yet not be a Christian. The fact admits of no controversy, everywhere you may find people who do not neglect their Bibles but who do most tragically neglect to follow Christ. The gospels do not contain the only instances of those who decided to follow Christ without knowing much about the issues involved. In all the centuries since, there have been men who have made a great deal of their professional claims concerning their friendship for Christ. There are many instances where some of the most outspoken and active representatives of the church, have done more to hinder the progress of religion than they have ever been known to do in removing the obstacles from the paths of Christian usefulness.

What the world needs more than anything else is the disposition to follow Christ in every direction where Christian service is needed to relieve the pressure of neglect, suffering and want. Anyone who is in possession of mental powers which enable him to tell north from south or day from night, is qualified to indicate his appreciation of the worth of Christ's teachings and his own obligations in a matter so vital to the welfare of mankind. Such a man may not attain a prominent place in the affairs of the church but this is not necessary in order to find one's way to a position of real usefulness. After all, it is better to make our profession no more pronounced than our ability to accomplish things worth while. Peter often got himself into trouble because of his disposition to make himself conspicuous in matters that he thought were strictly Apostolic obligations. Some of the most difficult lessons we have to learn are related to duties involved in our declared purpose to follow Christ. When that decision is formed we should be careful to understand its implications. To follow Christ embraces more obligations than are suggested in the formality of such an announcement. There are conditions to be met.

"If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me." Self-denial is still the condition today. There is no primrose path of self-indulgence leading to the goal of our ambitions and dreams. Would you be a disciple of Jesus? Then you must walk the way of discipleship made sacred and dignified by His footsteps. With more self-denial and cross bearing, our churches would never be upholstered parlors for the coddling of the saints; theological disputants would lay away their old musty and dusty shibboleths; denominations would begin to work in real co-operation. If the world with its sin, its grinding injustice and inhumanity, its social evil and liquor traffic, its Sabbath desecration and moral leprosy, is not resting upon us, then we are not responding to the call to follow Him. It is one thing to rally around the cross, ready to bear it; and it is quite another thing to sing about it and let others, if they will, carry it to their Gethsemane and up the steps to Calvary.

The sum and substance of our position

McLees-Bridge Nuptials Occur in Baptist Parsonage

The wedding of Miss Sara M. Bridge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eli Bridge, Second Street Pike, Southampton, and Archie H. McLees, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. McLees, 1627 Wilson avenue, took place Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in the parsonage of First Baptist Church, the Rev. Howard Zepp, pastor of the church, officiated.

Miss Helen Niemeyer, Bethayres and Raymond Eades, Trenton, N. J., attended the couple.

The bride was attired in a white shawl-like street length dress made with a bolero jacket, with short sleeves and embroidered in varicolored tones. Her slippers, gloves and large straw hat trimmed with a flower, were white, and she wore a corsage of tea roses.

Miss Niemeyer wore a beige lace dress over taffeta of the same tone. Her dress was made with the V cut neckline, short puffed sleeves and street length skirt. A giraffe of taffeta encircle a her waistline. Her slippers and felt hat were white, and she wore a corsage of tea roses.

A reception was held at the home of the groom. Thirty-six guests attended from Bristol, Southampton, Philadelphia and Trenton. Mr. and Mrs. McLees left Saturday evening by motor for several days visit in New York. Upon returning to Bristol, they will reside in an apartment at 216 Jefferson avenue.

Mr. McLees is employed by the Sinclair Oil Company.

BITTEN BY DOG

Barbara Ann Incollingo, 1105 Rising Sun avenue, Philadelphia, was bitten by a dog as she played on Burlington Island yesterday. Treatment was given in Harrison Hospital.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

The following work was carried on by the Executive Secretary and Visiting Nurse of the Bucks County Tuberculosis Society during the month of June:

Four new patients taken to Chest Clinic, four patients sent to Sanatoria, six new contacts, attended three meetings and four conferences in regards to patients, four visits with doctors in regards to patients.

A new county bridge will be built in Quakertown in the very near future. The concrete span will replace the old steel and wooden bridge on North Fourth street over Licking Run.

The Stout Construction Company, of Pottstown, was awarded the contract by the County Commissioners at the sum of $4,800. The Quakertown borough's share in the cost will be about $1,300.

Work will be started at any time and will be completed by September 1.

County Agent William F. Greenawald announced the names of five Bucks and Montgomery county wool producers who will serve as directors of the Bucks-Montgomery Wool Pool. They include Leroy Shutt, Chalfont; Seth VanPelt, New Hope; H. G. Bagley, New Hope; Theodore Heiser and Harry S. Spiess, both of Norristown.

Mr. Shutt will serve as president. Announcement was also made that bids for the 1938 clip have been asked for and the tentative date for grading and loading is Friday, July 15.

With about 200 people in attendance, a two-day estate sale of antiques and modern furnishings began Wednesday at 10 o'clock at 88-91 North Main street, Doylestown, the residence of the late Henry A. James.

Hundreds of people attended the exhibition and private viewing of the antiques and other possessions in the residence and law-office on Wednesday.

Beginning with the sale of kitchen and dining room articles, good prices were obtained with a single candlebra bringing $1.75, a pitcher $1.15 and a dinner table bell 75 cents.

During the past five months Morrisville borough has expended $11,253.27 for general borough expenses and $8,928.35 for the water department, or a total of $20,181.62, according to a report issued by Borough Engineer Harry H. Lee.

In the general borough account the largest item of expense has been the street lighting which cost $2,844.60. The garbage collection, another large item, cost $1,140.85.

The street department expended $2,902.86 of which $918.45 was for labor and $203.68 for materials. New street signs cost $189.10 and the West Hendrickson avenue drain $513.23.

The police department, including wages of regular and extra officers, expended $2,115.60 while the administration

BENSALEM BOARD HEARS FINAL REPORTS OF TERM

Annual Meeting Held in High School Building at Cornwells Heights

ELECT NEW MENTORS

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, July 11—Business for the 1937-38 school term was concluded and final reports read, and plans were laid for the coming 1938-39 school term when the Bensalem Township School Board held its annual meeting at the high school here Saturday afternoon. All members were present with William Abel, president, presiding.

Among the reports heard was included that of the treasurer, George Cragg, who stated that $3,500 had been received in delinquent taxes. Secretary L. L. Williams gave a detailed report of the receipts and expenditures for the school year. The total running expense for the year was given as $129,391.85.

Joseph Sharpe, chairman of the cafeteria committee, gave a detailed report of the accounts of his committee for the year. He reported a net profit of $114.57 on the cafeteria for the year.

Several new instructors were elected by the board to serve in the schools for the coming term. Raymond E. Watkins, New York University graduate, was elected as musical instructor to take the place of Earl J. Frick, resigned. Miss Anna Williams was elected to a position in the commercial department to fill the place of Miss Alma I. Klink. John F. Slavin was elected to a position in the commercial department left vacant by Mr. Corson, resigned. Ruth E. Long was elected to fill a vacancy in the Andalusia school.

Oscar Schreiber, Jr., chairman of the building and grounds committee, reported that his committee was working on the necessary repairs and renovations to all the schools in the district.

S. K. Faust, superintendent of schools, presented his regular nurse's and doctor's reports. He also gave a detailed summary attendance report for the school year. This report indicated an average daily attendance in all the schools of 1142. Of this number, 591 were boys and 556 girls. The

Fourth Veteran Dies

Gettysburg, July 11—Death today had claimed the fourth union veteran and the fifth Civil War veteran to pass away since the beginning of the last reunion of the Blue and Gray, June 29th, as Benjamin H. Happy, 96, of Minneapolis, Minn., succumbed to a heart condition aggravated by pneumonia.

TWO YOUTHS DROWN IN THIS VICINITY

A Mute Meets Death in Delaware River at Columbus Country Club

I DROWNS, TORRESDALE

Two youths were drowned in the Delaware river yesterday, one at Edgington and another at Torresdale.

An eight-year old boy, a mute, drowned in the Delaware river yesterday at the Columbus Country Club, Edgington. The lad was with his parents and a group of friends who were celebrating his birthday.

The victim, David Fierweiger, 2628 S. 8th street, Phila., was unable to call for help and was missing for two hours before his absence was discovered.

Unable to call for help, the boy sank in four feet of water, apparently after having been seized by cramps. He had complained of a stomach-ache shortly before he entered the water. His companions remained oblivious of his death for two hours, until members of the family noted he was missing.

In the search that followed, Milford Stern, 12, of 824 N. 41st street, Philadelphia, stumbled on the body in the water.

While the boy's parents, with his two brothers and a married sister, stood by, doctors and members of the Bucks County Rescue Squad attempted to revive the victim, unsuccessfully, with a pulmotor.

Two ambulances and two crews of the Bucks County Rescue Squad responded and worked for three and one-half hours in an attempt to revive the boy.

Bristol Consolidated firemen took the pulmotor to the scene from Bristol police headquarters.

Penna. Motor Police also responded to the call and assisted.

Robert Tshirik, 11, 1805 N. 26th street, Phila., was drowned late yesterday when he stepped into the 25 foot channel of the Delaware river near Pleasant Hill bathing beach, Torresdale.

Unable to swim, he had waded out about 10 feet, at a point where the channel runs close to the shore, and went suddenly beyond his depth. His brother, William, and his cousin, William Vogt, bathing with him saw the tragedy.

Thinking his brother had merely "ducked" beneath the surface, William waited several minutes, then shouted to gain the attention of hundreds of other bathers in the area.

Joseph Gillin, 24, of 6825 State rd., and Arthur Lamartine, 25, of 4948 Princeton avenue, Philadelphia, dived to rescue the victim, but failed to find his body.

Young Tshirik was visiting with his parents at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Vogt, cousins, at 9213 Germania street, and his visit to the bathing beach was his first.

Physicians, Wives Have Picnic On Webb Lawn

Dr. and Mrs. H. Doyle Webb were hosts at their residence, 939 Radcliffe street, yesterday afternoon and last evening, to members of the Bucks County Medical Society, their wives, and friends.

A picnic program was much enjoyed on the lawn of the Webb home, games and boating augmenting a dinner served on the lawn.

Fifty guests were in attendance.

Both Were Excited

(By "The Stroller")

A landscape gardener, who makes his home in Edgington, was painting his car this week, when an automobile advertising a religious group parked in front of his home.

A beautiful Hawaiian selection came from the amplifying system, and the wife of the gardener, busy on the second floor, thinking a neighbor had a radio turned on loud, hurried downstairs to get the same selection on her radio.

Unable to get the same music, she then noticed the car with the amplifying system, and asked her husband what the wording was on the side of the truck.

Impatiently, he replied: "The King's Message." Can't you read?" The wife sat for a few minutes, then burst out laughing, leaving the husband in a quandary for a few seconds until the little woman replied, "The King's Message." Why that says "The King's Message."

JOHN R. WORRALL, INJURED IN PLANE CRASH, DIES IN WOODBURY HOSPITAL; SON AND COMPANION ARE ALSO HURT

Hulmeville Pilot Fatally Hurt As His Bi-Plane Goes Into A Tailspin Near Woodbury, N. J., As Three Were En Route To Fishing Expedition—Charles Worrall 18, Also Hurt

(By International News Service)

WILLIAMSTOWN, N. J., July 11—John R. Worrall, 40, of Hulmeville, Pa., one of three men injured when their private plane crashed in a fog near here, while en route to Cape May, N. J., Sunday died today in nearby Woodbury Hospital. Worrall's son, Charles, 18, Hulmeville; and Victor Timer, 44, of Philadelphia, were injured slightly when the craft, piloted by the elder Worrall went into a tailspin, and crashed in a field on the outskirts of this community.

TWO BRISTOLIANS ARE MARRIED ON SATURDAY

Miss Mabel Evans Becomes Wife of A. J. Vreudenburg; Ceremony in Garden

ONE CEREMONY HERE

Miss Mabel R. Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Owen F. Evans, 241 Radcliffe street, and Albert J. Vreudenburg, 241 Radcliffe street, were united in marriage Saturday at six p. m., on the lawn of their future home, Street Road, near Lincoln Highway, Trevese.

The Rev. James R. Gailey, pastor of Bristol Presbyterian Church, performed the ceremony, which took place in the old-fashioned garden with a background of evergreens, in the presence of many relatives and friends. Prior to the ceremony, Mitchell Ancker, Radcliffe street, sang "Oh Promise Me" and "I Love You Truly." Concealed in the pine trees was a string orchestra of violins and cello, which rendered Lohengrin's Wedding March as the bride party entered the garden.

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson E. Harris, Trenton, N. J., attended the couple.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a model of shell pink embroidered organza over taffeta of the same tone. The form-fitting bodice featured the low-cut square neckline front and back, short puffed sleeves and the long, full skirt was cut with a short train. She wore three strand pearls, pink crepe slippers, a wreath of Lady Astor roses in her hair and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of Lady Astor roses and baby breath.

Mrs. Harris was attractive in a gown of poudre blue embroidered swiss over white taffeta, fashioned with V-shape neckline, bolero jacket with short puffed sleeves and long full skirt. She wore blue crepe slippers, a wreath of white roses in her hair, and carried a spray of white roses and blue delphinium.

The men were attired in white suits with corn-flower blue ties and boutonnieres.

The bride's mother wore a blue and white flowered chiffon dress with white accessories and a corsage of gardenias.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held. Small tables were arranged on the lawn and table covers and napkins were designed in woodland scenes. Supper was served to 85 guests. Garden flowers were used for table decorations.

Mr. and Mrs. Vreudenburg left Saturday evening for a motor trip. The bride travelled in a pink crepe ensemble with poudre blue accessories. Mr. Vreudenburg is employed as plant engineer at the Paterson Parchment Paper Company, Edgely.

In the rectory of St. Mark's Catholic Church, a wedding occurred Saturday at four p. m., when Miss Lellis C. Kallenbach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Kallenbach, Fairview Lane, became the bride of James E. Harrison, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Harrison, 162 Otter street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. Paul Baird, in the presence of relatives and friends. Miss Katharine Keating played the wedding march.

Miss Phyllis Kallenbach, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Miss Dorothy Harrison, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid. The groom was attended by Herman Schmidt, Maple Beach, brother-in-law of the bride, and Paul Keating, Radcliffe street.

The bride wore a gown of white imported organza over white taffeta. The form-fitting bodice shirred in front featured the drop shoulders, and the floor-length skirt, cut full, was made with three tiers of material

RECTOR CONVALESCING

The Rev. George E. Boswell, rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, is convalescing at his home after being a patient in the Episcopal Hospital, Philadelphia, for a tonsilectomy.

NAIL CUT OFF

John Wiltshire, 340 New Brook street, lost a fingernail when the member came in contact with a slicing machine Saturday. He was treated at Harriman Hospital.

The elder Worrall sustained a broken leg, and severe cuts of the face, 28 stitches being required at Underwood Hospital, Woodbury, to which institution the trio was taken.

The younger Worrall also suffered a broken leg, and broken tooth.

The Philadelphia, although having no broken bones, had 13 stitches taken in his chin, and two in a cut over his eye.

All three had sprained backs, and possible internal injuries.

The trio left an airport at Somerton yesterday morning at 8.30 bound for a day of fishing at Cape May. It is stated that as they reached a point north of Williamstown, N. J., a few miles from Woodbury, engine trouble developed as they flew through a heavy fog. The engine was missing according to residents in the area, and when the craft went into a tail-spin and struck the earth, the engine was buried in the earth.

The elder Worrall, who has been a licensed pilot for a number of years, is survived by his wife, two daughters and two sons.

None of the stunned victims was able to give a coherent account of what happened. But three startled farmers, performing early morning chores, witnessed the crash and extricated the fliers from tangled wreckage and fishing tackle.

The plane, apparently lost in the fog, experienced motor trouble which sent it into a tailspin. The plane crashed in a tomato field on the farm of Mrs. Elizabeth Collins.

Nathaniel Roun, farmer, who with Leon Curry and Edward Brown, witnessed the plane's fall, said: "I was watering my horses a little before 8 o'clock when I heard the plane. There was a good bit of fog and the plane was circling around as if it was lost, appearing now and again through the low hanging bank of clouds."

"Some time later, maybe 20 or 30 minutes, I heard it again and saw it come into view. It sounded like the

Honor Pastor Who Has Served Church 15 Years

Members of Presbyterian Church of Our Saviour tendered the Rev. Andrew Solla a surprise party Friday evening in honor of his 15th anniversary as pastor of the church. Those attending this affair were gathered in the basement of the church when the Rev. Solla arrived. Thomas Harper told the Rev. Solla the reason for the gathering, then introduced Miss Goergeite Clavarella, missionary, who had arranged a number of interesting games.

The Rev. Arthur Sargis, pastor of Edgington Presbyterian Church, led in prayer. Refreshments were served. The Sunday School room was decorated in pink and white. A large cake formed the centerpiece. Isaac Jones, Croydon, and Dominick Rago, Bristol, gave short talks. On behalf of those present, Mr. Rago presented a six-way lamp, and a clock, to the Rev. Solla, and Miss Goergeite Clavarella presented a friendship pin to the Rev. Solla. The Rev. and Mrs. Solla expressed their appreciation for the party and the gifts, then Rev. Sargis offered prayer. The benediction was given by the Rev. Solla.

Miss Jennie Tisione, presented a large bouquet of cut flowers to Rev. and Mrs. Solla.

IN THE AIR

New and strange devices for aerial navigation are competing for attention with the mammoth machines now under construction along lines of earlier development. In this country, we read of a ship to have a wing spread of 250 feet and a passenger capacity of 100 persons. If you want a visible comparison relating to size, you might remember that 250 feet is equivalent to the length of many a city block.

The latest aerial news from Germany has reference to what the dispatches refer to as a "house fly" flying machine. It is so named, we presume, because it can go forward or backward, up or down, sideways or even stand still in the air. No house fly can do better tricks than that, if we except the fly's ability to walk on the ceiling.
This machine is of the helicopter type, having rotating wings, the inclination of which determines its direction of movement. Of course, the helicopter is not a new idea in flying, but the German adaptation of the principle involved appears to have made considerable advancement over previous attempts to develop it into a practicable and efficient flying machine. Of course, that does not necessarily mean that it has yet arrived at anywhere near perfection. But in this connection one can recall a prediction that eventually man's flight in the air will be made with machines having little resemblance to the best he has so far produced.

QUIT WORRYING!

As now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party, it is just as well that the matter of who is to play Scarlett O'Hara in the film version of "Gone With the Wind" is cleared away before we take up the state of the Union and the election of a new Congress. In weather like this no prudent man will divide his energies.

We do not mean by this that we have heard the last of the O'Hara issue. The vast public that is wrapped up in such things will be divided, we know, on the casting of Norma Shearer in the role of the Confederate belle. There is a school which holds Miss Shearer to be the movie queen par excellence and another which sees in her an intelligent young woman with nice teeth.

They will have to fight it out between them. We did what we could in the long campaign to get Lily Pons married to that musician (an effort recently crowned with success) and have been trying to get the other music fellow to do the right thing by Garbo. It has taken a great deal out of us, and now we must beg to be excused from assuming an attitude in the row sure to grow up around the Shearer selection.

We are saving ourselves for the fate of the nation which is to be decided at the polls again this fall. It is a trivial preoccupation perhaps, beside brave and momentous happenings in Hollywood. On the whole it is one in which it is safer to pick a side.

We never got the full story on Bandmaster Stokowski's auto accident in Sweden. Does he blame it on the horns?

Joe Louis is to rest up until 1939. The front office has run out of human sacrifices, and those two-minute fights take a lot out of a man.

A tale of intimidation comes from Florida, where Harry Richman was lately married and 17 best men cut off all escape.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol Dec. 14, 1876. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

Upwards of 70 inmates in the County jail! All comfortably provided for and the building in clean condition. Thus sayeth the Grand Jury, and the wall for a new jail is heard no more in the land.

The new depot at the Doylestown terminus will be occupied by the railroad company's employees about Christmas.

The new road from Hulmeville to Langhorne station has been confirmed by the court, and a bridge will soon be built over the railroad track, where the road is to cross.

A number of persons walked from Bristol to Burlington on the ice last Sunday. Charles Smoley went through but was rescued without much difficulty.

The revenue raised for borough purposes by taxation amounts to about $8,000. The people are asked to vote nearly one-fourth of this amount to the Bristol Water Company.

The residence of L. McMackin, on Dorrance street, was entered last Thursday night, and a goodly portion of his wearing apparel, consisting of two coats, vest, pants, and underclothing, taken. The thief after hav-

The Bristol Woolen Mills Fire Brigade are progressing rapidly. They expect to have the new house ready for the engine on the first of January. The following property owners have kindly subscribed towards building the house: Samuel Appleton, Joseph White, Rogers Brothers, J. Wesley Wright, Jacob Simons, William Hawk, H. M. Wright, Wilson Randall, Seth W. Booz, William Jeffries, Joseph Wilkinson, Joseph Beurk, Samuel Swain, Charles S. Bailey, Stephen H. Carr, Matthias Stroeble, Thomas Morris, John McConnell, Mrs. Eliza Barton, Patrick McLaughlin, Jermia Kelly, Patrick Callahan, Joseph Leslie, Michael Garvey, John Dougherty, Mrs. Mulhern, William Dougherty, John Wright, Arthur Dorrance, John McFadden, William Coffman, John Hardy, Hannah Peterson, John Gallagher, Sarah Dugan, James McGinley, Samuel Hibbs, Dennis Callahan, Benjamin Londerbough, John McGinley, Mary McVain, William Clymer, Edward C. Bruden, John Broadnix, Peter Elmer, John Cacey, Philip Callahan, James McVaine.

When the stock was being subscribed to the Bristol Water Company it was stated and understood by all parties that fire protection would be given en the borough for about $300 a year. With this understanding the money was paid in, and the works were built. Today we are told that $1800 is the lowest sum that the board of directors of the company will consent to furnish it for.

The Trenton True American says: "On Thanksgiving day a target company named the Hibernian Guards, of New Brunswick, visited this city and were entertained by the A. O. H. of this city. They proceeded to Morrisville Grove, headed by Peterman's Seventh regiment band, where they had a "shoot" and returned to this city with a well marked target. They dined at the Revere House, on Hanover street, and partook of a dinner gotten up in Mine Host Roger's best style. They returned to New Brunswick on an evening train highly delighted with the day's amusement.

Sunday morning at two o'clock it was discovered by a watchman that the large barn in the rear of the railroad depot at Burlington, N. J., was on fire. The alarm was immediately given, but in the high wind prevailing the flames gained headway so rapidly that before the engines could get to work the barn was a mass of fire, and sparks had communicated the flames to the frame houses on Main street, and the gale blowing from the west drove the flame before it with astonishing rapidity. The whole city was soon aroused, and every effort was made by the citizens to arrest the course of the conflagration. Three houses on Main street were swept away in a few minutes, and the fire then seized on a row of two-story frame houses on York street. At this time it was feared that the whole town would be destroyed, and dispatches were sent to Camden

Mason-Dixon Line Visible From the Air

Surveyed nearly two centuries ago, the Mason-Dixon line between Pennsylvania and Maryland is still plainly seen. Few of the original ground markers remain but pilots of the American Airlines recently noticed the line cutting through the thick woods, as shown above.

Sins Pointed Out By Christ

fession, the Alpha and Omega of our religion, is to meet the conditions of following Christ. We cannot ask the world to follow Jesus until we have convinced the world that we are His followers. We are Christians by following Christ. The Christian life is not alone motions, or emotions, but motives; creed translated into life. He who would follow Jesus, let him open his New Testament and read what it means. One must be a hard and fast walker who would follow the Master.

"Master, I will follow Thee whithersoever Thou goest." A mere professional claim of discipleship, without consideration of the issues involved, may lead one to utter extremes. Either back to the old theology with the wrath of God and the fear of hell in the ascendency, or the opposite extreme, to a theology which is a pleasing sentimentality, an idealization, a satisfying optimism. In every century of the church's history, there have been groups of extremists who have striven mightily, "played their part upon the stage and then have been heard of no more." In our day of fierce challenges, with problems unparalleled in the world's history, any extremist will find fertile soil for the sowing of his seed. Any dogmatic, heavy-driving personality can gain wide allegiance whether his proposition be some crazy economic scheme or an incredible theology. Moreover, the numerical increase of any type of religious zealot is liable to be looked upon as an evidence of divine favor. Let us remember that the truth is not tested by counting noses on either side of any theological fence. The tests, standards and criteria of truth are quite otherwise. What are the tests of Christianity? Paul answers, "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of His." Jesus answers, "Hereby shall all men know that ye are My disciples, if ye have love one to another." We must all be content with these simple and spiritual tests; we must count as a Christian everyone who lives in that spirit. Particular doctrines and creeds, outward forms and formulas must be kept in their proper place; they are valuable for those who prize them and they should be respected by all; but they must be regarded as essential by none.

What Christianity needs today is a recovery of a sense of Christianity as a world movement and that Christians come to see the Church as an instrument to be used, sharpened, bent into new shape, or wholly replaced, as the need of the world may demand and as God may will. Thus to see Christianity is not to change Christianity into something new; it is to find the original ideal of Christianity which Jesus revealed, which the apostles held and which has been woefully disregarded. When we come to see Jesus' ideal of the kingdom of God we realize that it does not mean maintaining the Church as a sacrosanct institution of God, something to be preserved at all hazards in its traditional form. Traditionalism has led some to a most incredible theology which is usually demonstrated by a recitation and repetition of platitudes. It is a type of theology which cannot survive the progress of education and intelligence. The future does not belong to it. As the years and the centuries pass, the Christianity which abides, is that which is lived by men who fasten their belts, lace their shoes, pull on their coats and follow Christ realistically. These were Peter's instructions recorded in the 12th chapter of the Acts. At the command of Herod, Peter was to be executed. He was in prison and in the cell he slept between two soldiers. He was bound with two chains and for added caution guards were placed at the outside door of the cell. An angel appeared during the night and struck Peter on the side, awakening him, saying: "Rise quickly, fasten your belt and lace your sandals; throw your cloak around you and follow me." Peter and his friends prayed constantly to God for liberty. Peter was told that he too must help to achieve his freedom and he did it. Miss Jane Addams saw the tragedy of poverty 50 years ago. She saw people who had no share in the beauty of life and who were cheated of all delight. She saw the waste and shoddy of human society. She heard the call of Jesus Christ: "Jane Addams, rise quickly, fasten your belt, lace your shoes, throw your cloak around you and follow Me." Hull House then came into being. You need a tight belt and well fastened shoes to keep step with the Master; He is a hard and fast walker.

There are many battles to be fought and many conquests to be made, and you can be the man or woman God is waiting for. What potential powers for good are now buried beneath the rubbish of contentment, indifference and selfishness. "Scribes, Pharisees, hypocrites," would be the Master's withering words today," says Dr. Fosdick, to that Church which sits on the sidelines voicing its traditional platitudes, "pretending to care for the souls of people but not interested in the slums that damn them, or the city government which corrupts them, or the economic order that cripples them." "Rise quickly, tighten your belt, lace your shoes, throw your cloak around you and follow Me."

Religion was never intended as an "opiate," a slow drug that places civilization under obedience to some sacerdotal caste. Roman Catholicism and Protestantism have both taken their turns at making a fool out of the average man. Without a doubt if every man accepted the truth contained in the "Sermon on the Mount" and practiced its precepts there would be no question about either the workability of Christianity or the realism of Christian discipleship. Only in such a healthy Christianity lies the road to the economic, industrial and social state every man desires. "Rise quickly, tighten your belt, lace your shoes, throw your cloak around you and follow Me." Let us take the full meaning of the words and deeds of Christ, fulfilling them in our lives to the best of our ability. With meaningful, realistic consecration, let us strive—though we be the only one—to follow in politics, in business, and in society the way Christ gave to us, knowing in our hearts that He is always with us.

"The STOLEN GOD" by EDISON MARSHALL

CHAPTER XXIII

That night, with St. Pierre's help, Ned planned a little surprise for Chambon.

The governor had invited the distinguished young Vicome to dinner. He was to come alone, so they could sit together over aperitifs and talk in their own tongue of their own land. Ever so handsome in his well-cut dinner-clothes, Chambon set out for the Residence soon after night-fall, his flashlight dancing before him down the road.

Ned stood in the alley behind the bungalow, wishing him a long and pleasant entertainment. He had no cause for envy; he, too, had an interesting engagement. Presently, under the sentry-light, would pass a little yellow mess boy named Hai-Lai, once an opium-vender in Haiphong, but now the head of St. Pierre's secret police, and coveted by every district governor in Indo-China.

Together they would search Chambon's bags and belongings in the thorough-going Oriental way. Where Ned forgot to look, Hai-Lai would remember: every hole and corner big enough to conceal the sacred diamond turned wrong side out, from his perfume-bottle to the lining of his clothes, and then replaced exactly as he had left them.

The search might not reveal the jewel. Chambon would not likely take chances on the prying eyes and probing fingers of native servants. If so, he would have the misfortune to encounter roving bandits on his way home from the Residence. They too would be skilful searchers, and one of the barefooted vagabonds might even make off with his shoes, to be found and returned next morning with no sign that the heels had been removed, searched, and replaced.

Watching for his confederate, Ned failed to glance behind him. In his job as the hunter, he forgot that he also might be the hunted. And he did not remember until he felt something sharp, with gentle pressure behind it, pierce his shirt and prick the skin of his back.

It was slow, like the sting of a wood fly, but Ned did not slap at it. He had already taken note that it stung him in that little hollow under his shoulder-muscles, with not a rib between the point and his heart. He only stood utterly inert, holding his breath, his heart not daring to beat, praying to the white man's God that this might be the white man's business and the steel be clean.

"Lift the arms—slowly, very slowly," some one whispered in the darkness over his shoulder. It was the Laotian vernacular.

"Yes, master," was Ned's breathless acknowledgment.

"Now turn slowly . . . Walk not fast, but fast enough . . . Is the point deep enough to feel?"

"I am aware of some slight pricking on my back, as comes in the summer rains."

"Spoken like the Laotian chief you are! Touching you so lightly in the dark, still I was afraid you would cry out, and make me press a little on the hilt; but now you shall live to see your grandchildren wedded, with only the loss of your silver that the rich Tuans will replace. . . . Now the right, lord—through this little alley—and now the left. . . . And here we are, a place to lie at leisure, in the company of good fellows of the town."

The wan moonlight showed an abandoned courtyard in the rear of a native shop. Three dark forms were there, motionless as idols, but soon Ned saw they were natives in coolie dress.

Take off his clothes, that we may see there is no secret hoard."

"Is this the hospitality you give a stranger to your city?" Ned asked. It was necessary that he show the deep-grained reluctance of a Laotian chief at the baring of his body.

"You will lose no face in this darkness, O proud one. We do not even know your name. We are only your servants, disrobing you for the night."

They stripped him, felt the lining of his clothes, looked in his arm pits, rubbed their hands over his skin for a new scar—for rich Laotians had been known to bury rubies in their own flesh—and searched his sandals. Ned had one moment of real terror when with curled lean fingers they combed his wig, but they did not discover where it joined his shaven head. They worked so slowly that it seemed to Ned they were deliberately wasting time.

"He has nothing but this little silver, a pistol and a magic light, gifts of his lords, and an ivory amulet on a brass chain," the chief searcher reported at last. "Shall I give him back his charm and let him go?"

"Better unload and give back the pistol, too," one of the others said. "I do not wish to have it in my waist the next time I am searched by the French police, and go to prison as a rebel."

So the unloaded gun and the amulet were returned. Ned was permitted to dress, but still his captors delayed turning him free.

"There are people passing through the alley," one of them explained, too glibly for Ned's peace of mind. "Wait till the way is clear."

Soon soft steps were heard, and two other men, dressed as peddlers, took shape in the moonlight.

"You have caught no birds?" the man with the knife demanded.

"There is nothing but beggars on the road, but I see you have done better," one of the newcomers answered. "Was his craw full of gold?"

"Nothing but a little silver." Then, to Ned: "Go quickly, and praise your gods that they have made you a good Laotian and an honest servant."

Even this last speech, bold as it was, would have meant nothing to one who knew nothing; it was just such a jest as might be expected from a native street bandit. But for Ned it settled the case.

He departed quickly as he was bidden, found a little yellow man waiting for him at the servants' door, and called him to his own cubby-hole in the basement.

"Why not go quickly to our business?" the Annamite police officer demanded. "Tuan Chambon and his Excellency are well at the soup by now."

Ned examined his few belongings, his eyes alert as those of a hunted fox doubled back on his own trail, but with a little crook at the corner of his mouth.

"Our business tonight is over, before it begins."

"Is this a jest?" The little Annamite had the sensitive skin of his race, especially where his official dignity was at stake.

"It is a jest, but a bitter one. If Chambon Tuan has the jewel himself, would he send his hirelings to scrape my very skin and look into the seams of my pack-sack. Did any one enter the servants' door since you came?"

"Only two peddlers. In a little while the soldiers drove them forth."

defile their god. It leaves only the Annamite car-drivers and their helpers. They are your own race; search for one who salaams too deeply to every Buddhist image at the crossroads, and you will find the Unbeliever who did the sacrifice. I will stand at your elbow, and if you recover the jewel, half the King's reward shall be yours."

"A hint in trade for a hint," Pal-Lai's slanted eyes began to twinkle. "I do not aspire to your wisdom, T'Fan, but I have made one little guess you might condescend to hear."

Ned acknowledged the gibe with a smile. "It is permitted." "You remember I was once an opium vender in Haiphong, with many white men and their ladies for customers. I learned to tell by a man's face whether he is at the beginning or the end, whether he smokes ten—fifty—or a hundred pipes a day. My eye is not now so keen, but I would venture that your lord Chambon is not wholly unacquainted with the first sweet scent of the black smoke."

"Impossible," Ned answered. But he knew perfectly well that nothing was impossible in the affair of the Emerald Buddha.

The Eagle and the Parrot still flew in a circle. Ned must pretend to be taken in by the footpad trick, or he would betray his rôle as an innocent and unsuspecting Laotian headman. So he went to the lounge of the bungalow and begged audience with Sahib Chambon.

Griffin was reading there alone. "The Vicome has gone to the Residence for dinner," he said. "What do you want, T'Fan?"

"I did not mean to disturb the master of the caravan with my little trouble. Lord, I have been robbed by ruffians on the street. The sum is little, but the indignity is great, considering in whose train I serve. Does my lord's face require that I report to the French police?"

"I guess my face will stand the disfigurement." Suddenly the lamp-light flowed and filled to the brim Griffin's shrewd eyes. But he did not speak for a long time. Leisurely he filled one of his many pipes, tapping the tobacco with his thumb.

"So footpads robbed you, did they, T'Fan?" he echoed at last, while Ned waited with a wildly-beating heart. "I suppose they went through you very carefully."

"To my very skin, lord."

"As though they thought you might have something mighty valuable?"

"Perhaps so, lord. I did not think of it till now."

"You didn't eh? You're quite a fellow, T'Fan. Come with me into my room."

For once in his life, Ned could not dream what was coming. Griffin locked the door after them, pulled down the window-shades, and picked up his big calabash tobacco-pipe lying in plain sight on the reading-table by his bed. He had evidently filled it, lighted it, and laid it down, because the bowl was full of scorched tobacco.

Ned saw him knock out the pipe and catch something in his hand.

"Do you suppose this was what they were looking for, T'Fan?" Griffin asked in tones incredibly calm.

Blinding bright in his palm, spurting cold blue flame, was the sacred diamond from the forehead of the Emerald Buddha.

The lambent flame in Griffin's hand seemed to hypnotize Ned. Only with a surge of his will did he remember his rôle.

"Lord, I do not understand."

"None of that boy." Griffin spoke with a gruff good-humor. "We're going to talk this over, one man to another. And then, after a little more, 'One white man to another.'"

Ned jumped as though the words were a bullet. "Then your daughter told you?"

"No. She's like her daddy—plays her own game."

ON SCREENS IN BRISTOL

BRISTOL

There's some fancy hi-jinks going on down at the Bristol Theatre this week. For the new film, "Cocoanut Grove," that premiered there last night is the swing-happy and slightly screwy story of how "name" bands are born.

Fred MacMurray heads a large cast of tried and proven favorites that include Harriet Hilliard, the radio thrush, as his romantic lead, Ben Blue, the Yacht Club Boys, Rufe Davis, Harry Owens and his Royal Hawaiian Orchestra, Billy Lee and Dorothy Howe. The focal point of the story is the mecca of all young bandleaders, the actual Cocoanut Grove in the Hotel Ambassador in Los Angeles, long called the "spring-board of the stars." MacMurray leads a swing-nutty crew of musicians right across the continent, picking up talent here and there, until he finally makes the grade at the Grove.

Both MacMurray and Miss Hilliard play parts in the film that are almost the exact prototype of their real lives. The tall star actually barnstormed the country for several years before he was "discovered" by the movies, while Miss Hilliard, off the screen, is the wife of Ozzie Nelson and sings with his band. And that is why the new film is different than most musical comedies. It's a down-to-earth, screwy, but at the same time, true story of how swing bands originate.

"Cocoanut Grove" has plenty of jitterbug fare with its four new songs, "Says My Heart," "You Leave Me Breathless," "Cocoanut Grove" and "Dreamy Hawaiian Moon," the last named two composed by Harry Owens, the songwriter who wrote last year's hit number one, "Sweet Lili'ani," plus plenty of romance and heart appeal in the plot.

cordon pleated. A girdle of self-material finished the waistline. The finger-tip tulle veil was cap effect, and had a coronet of orange blossoms. She wore white satin sandals, long lace mitts and carried orchids and lilies-of-the-valley.

The attendants were attractive in gowns fashioned similarly, but different in color. They were made of mousseline de sole over taffeta. The bodices were tight-fitting with square necklines and short puffed sleeves, and the skirts were long and full. Miss Kallenbach wore pink over taffeta of the same tone, light blue satin sandals, and a large blue horsehair hat which tied in a bow under the chin. Miss Harvison wore light blue over taffeta with the pink accessories. Each attendant carried an old-fashioned bouquet of mixed flowers blending with their gowns.

The bride's mother was attired in an orchid flowered chiffon dress, large leghorn hat, white slippers and gloves, and wore a corsage of tea roses. The groom's mother wore a dark blue and white chiffon dress with white accessories, and a corsage of tea roses.

A reception for the immediate families was held at the Stacy-Trent Hotel, Trenton, N. J. Covers were laid for 20. The couple left Saturday evening for a week's motor trip through the New England States. The bride travelled in a dark blue chiffon dress, large corn color rough straw hat, linen slippers trimmed with luggage tan leather, luggage tan gabardine handbag and gloves, and a corsage of orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Harvison will reside in an apartment at 709 Radcliffe street.

The bride was born in LaPort, Ind., and has resided in Bristol for the past 19 years. She is a graduate of Bristol high school, and up to her marriage was employed in the office of Rohm & Haas Company. She is a member of the Junior Travel Club. Mr. Harvison, a resident of Bristol all his life, graduated from Bristol high school, and is employed by the Prudential Life Insurance Company.

This is MURDER Too!

THE MURDER of defenseless men, women and children on the Highways of Pennsylvania must be STOPPED and stopped quickly. If you are the type of driver that ignores all rules of safe driving—if you're the kind that "cuts in"—crosses white Safety lines—breaks speed limits—rushes past crossings—tries to "beat the light"—and ignores all "STOP" signs, then you're in for it. You're headed for serious trouble, because if an accident doesn't catch up with you soon, the long arm of the LAW will.

The State of Pennsylvania and the Governor's Highway Safety Council is sparing neither time nor effort to run these Highway Criminals off the road. If you drive sensibly and safely, you are in no danger of running afoul of the law. But, if you are determined to drive recklessly, we are out to get you and your kind, to protect the lives of our decent, law-abiding citizens.

WARNING!

All Drivers found guilty of motor vehicle accidents involving personal injury, must be re-examined to determine ability to drive.

TOMS RIVER DEFEATS MULHOLLAND'S NINE

Poor umpiring was the cause of the Bristol A. A. defeat at Toms River on Sunday by the score of 7 to 6. In the fourth inning the Jersey men scored three runs when the side should have been retired with runners on third and first base with two men out. Shell started to steal second and was caught three feet from the bag, but was called safe by the umpire. Grooms, the next batter, tripled, scoring two runs and scored later on a hit. Comstock was driven from the mound in the sixth inning.

LANDRETH NINE WINS OVER RIVERSIDE TEAM

Landreth defeated Riverside of the Burlington County League, Sunday, 7 to 5, after a hard-fought up-hill battle. The visitors went to Toms River for Lefty Irons, the pitcher who beat the Farmers there two weeks ago, but yesterday he was knocked out of the box in the fifth inning.

Howard Black allowed only two hits after a bad first inning. Nelson featured with a terrific home-run to deep left center, while Harwi kept up his hitting streak with a double and single. Elvert made two wonderful stops and throws from behind the second base bag.

LANDRETH SEEDS IX SHUT OUT BY SPRING CITY

Coccle's effective pitching supported by good fielding which at times bordered on the sensational gave the Stony Run Cardinals a shut out victory 9-0 over Landreth Seeds at Spring City, Pa., Friday evening.

The Farmers were handicapped from the start, delayed by auto trouble they arrived late and had to start playing without batting or fielding practice after a two-hour ride.

Landreth's only scoring chance came in the last inning. Costello walked and advanced to third on Dougherty's two base drive to right centre. Coccle knocked down Lodge's bullet drive and retired the runner at first. Van Sant failed to get the ball out of the infield.

The all-around playing of Gordon and a catch by Vic Rockhill in the second inning were features.

THIRD WARD NINE WINS OVER WEST PHILA., 5-3

On Sunday afternoon the strong Third Ward A. C. of Bristol defeated the highly-touted Bachelors A. C. of West Philadelphia, 5 to 3, behind the masterful three-hit twirling of port-sider Tommy Muffett. Opposed to Muffett on the hill was Joe Lingo, who stands eleventh in the Phila. Record's sandlot poll. Joe seemed to have plenty of stuff on the ball himself until the seventh inning when he was chased to cover by a barrage of base-knocks which produced three runs and the victory.

Muffett was invincible on the mound and but for some shaky fielding by his mates might easily have shut out the visiting clubbers. Tommy walked but two and fanned seven matters in his victory. Outstanding feats of the game were the batting of Manager John Dougherty, who had a long triple, a single, and scored three of his team's runs, and the steady fielding of Ed Jefferies, who also had himself a lousy bingle. This game marked the third consecutive conquest for the Warders who have yet to taste defeat during the current campaign.

Prospectville Resident Is Instantly Killed

HATBORO, July 11.—William Krause, 59, a florist of Linekln Pike and Tennis avenue, Prospectville, was instantly killed here yesterday afternoon at 3.30, when the truck in which he was riding was struck by an automobile, the truck overturning.

Krause's son, Philip, 23, who was operating the truck, was unhurt, but a daughter Violet, 15, sustained a fracture of the elbow and numerous lacerations; and his son, William, Jr., 16, has a broken nose. The latter two were taken to Abington Hospital for treatment.

The driver of the other machine in-

engine stopped at times and then I heard it backfire.

"While I was still watching, the plane suddenly went into a tailspin and crashed.

"We had trouble extricating the pilot, as he was tangled in the wreckage. The engine was buried several feet in the earth."

Roun and his two companions got automobiles and took the three injured men to the hospital, the elder Worrall and Timmer unconscious.

Timmer is a mechanic and has a wife and three children.

HUGE EGG KILLS HEN

SOUTH BEND, Ore. — (INS) — A Plymouth Rock hen owned by Mrs. Al Carruthers was dead today because its egg-making apparatus went wild.

The hen was killed after it acted strangely for several days. The reason for its strange actions was found to be a huge egg, 3½ inches long and 2½ inches in diameter, which proved sufficient alone to make a large cake.

URGES TEACHERS TO MARRY

BOSTON—(INS)—If school teachers having an opportunity to marry take Mayor Maurice J. Tobin's advice, they will resign, say "yes" to suitors and start to raise families.

For families are needed to bolster the decreasing lower grade school enrollment here. Loss of pupils in the first six grades eventually may result in the hiring of fewer teachers, said Tobin.

UNEARTH GRAVESTONES

EXETER, N. H. — (INS) — Townspeople are unearthing old gravestones in the Congregational Church here in connection with this community's 300th anniversary. A number of stones bear dates of the early 18th century.

PROPOSE ENDOWMENTS

VANCOUVER, B. C. — (INS) — Friends of the University of British Columbia have been urged to take out insurance policies, payable to the institution, to create an endowment fund for worthy students. J. C. Clark, official of an electrical firm, said the scheme is feasible and has been employed by various church organizations to liquidate building debts.

CAUSE AND CURE OF HEADACHES

*Colorfully
Abundantly
Forcefully*

Are you wrecking your personality as the result of over-work, abuse, or high pressure living? Or, are you overly conservative, unduly sparing yourself, failing to fire up your boilers to a point of real efficiency? In short, are you in the RUTS?

Your health determines your capacity to enjoy life—to get the most out of life. What you accomplish is measured by your mental, physical, and emotional well-being. If your "machine" is functioning efficiently you will have a clearer head—show greater enthusiasm for your work, your family, and your friends. You will naturally be good-natured and efficient. You will rid yourself of fear, anxiety, uncertainty and indecision—substituting faith, courage and decision.

THE MODERN HEALTH LIBRARY brings to you a wealth of up-to-date knowledge and experience to aid you and your family in the attainment of a healthy, happy, and successful life. It answers every-day problems of mental and physical hygiene—those little nagging disorders that prevent your feeling your best—doing your best—living your best. And, in an interesting, easy-to-understand style the Authors discuss the broader problems of mental and physical well-being. They talk about the most important subject in the world—YOU!

HOW TO GET YOUR HEALTH LIBRARY

Look for the MODERN HEALTH LIBRARY certificate on page one of each daily issue. Present six consecutively numbered certificates with 47c for the sixth volume of this valuable library. If you haven't already started to acquire your set, begin today. Certificates will appear daily.
